Dear Mr Jones,

I am a pupil at All Saints school in Nuneaton. We are learning about a man called Walter Tull. He spread racism in football matches. We ~~having~~<sup>have</sup> been working on him for the half term.

Walter Tull was the first ever black officer in the British Army. He was also a professional footballer and a war hero who fought in the first Somme battle and survived.

He used to play for Clapton Fc <sup>which</sup> ~~which~~ was ~~were~~ his first team he played for. His coach knew he was amazing. He had a great responsibility as a footballer.

He was smart, caring, intelligent, loving and very helpful and careful.

He was brave and joined the military.

His bravery during the war was outstanding. He was never afraid nor showing cowardice. He was supposed to get the Military cross but he died in 1918 before world war 2 and after world war 1 because he got shot heading straight into No Man's Land but couldn't be saved.

I think he deserves the military cross because we all love his bravery.

Yours Sincerely
From All Saints.
